

At the library

A social story for the Elma Turner Library

This is the entrance to my library.

Inside the library there are two bright screens and lots of books.

The people working at the library help me find what I am looking for and answer questions.

We can talk in the library but do not shout or run.

I use my quiet voice because some people might be studying or reading.

The children's library is down a purple tunnel. The carpet has lots of different shapes and colours.

This area can be bright because of the carpet and the windows.

There is another bright rainbow carpet by the picture books.

There are sunglasses and headphones to use if it is too bright or noisy.

And a weighted dog I can cuddle if I feel overwhelmed.

Or I can sit on the sensory chair to have time to myself.

There are lots of things to do here.

I can sit and read a book, comic or magazines.

I can build and play.

I can take home books, DVDs and magazines with my library card.

The librarian at the desk can check them out. Or I can do it myself on the machine.

Next to the library is a park to play in.
This is where I can be loud and run.

There is a bathroom in the children's library tunnel if I need one.

Going to the library is fun! I can't wait to visit again.
